Hero vs Stunt

The "hero" suit is the version of the costume that was worn by the actress which usually had minor differences to make the costume look more "cool" and was less functional.

The "stunt" suit is a version used for stunts that included alterations to allow the stunt-performers better movement, usually without the helmets flying off.

The most common difference between Hero and stunt is around the helmet.

Hero

The hero helmet is often closed with magnets and a elastic band at the top of the helmet.

Stunt

The stunt version of the helmet includes functional latches on the side of the helmet to help secure it during action sequences.

 - While they used to have really good quality the reputation has gone downhill over the past 10 years.
 - Constant reports of long wait times (years)
 - Degraded quality, chips in the helmets and visors, paint issues etc.
 - At this time it is advised you try the other makers first.
